New day for gay marriage

County clerks to issue marriage licenses, convert civil unions as law begins across all of Illinois

Chicago Tribune

When Shannon and Michele Fagiano convert their civil union into a marriage license Monday—the first business day that Illinois' same-sex marriage law is in effect—little will change in their lives, the couple said.

They've been together long enough to have sequential cellphone numbers.

"'Titanic' was our first movie," said Shannon Fagiano, 36, of Round Lake Beach, referring to the 1997 film. "We would have been married years and years ago."

Because the state's same-sex marriage law took effect Sunday, clerks in most collar counties said they planned to begin issuing licenses to same-sex couples Monday.

Starting then, couples like the Fagianos who have civil unions can convert them into marriage licenses backdated to when their civil union ceremonies took place. Those who choose to have a wedding still can convert their unions and have the new ceremony date issued on the license, Lake County Clerk Willard Helander said.

Helander, who issued the county's first civil union to the Fagianos three years ago Sunday, said she expected "quite a few" couples to show up for a license Monday morning.

"It will probably be a lot of the folks we saw the first day for civil unions," Helander said.

Michele (center) and Shannon Fagiano play with their daughter Riley on Sunday. MICHAEL TERCHIA/TRIBUNE

"We served a lot of people that day."

In DuPage County, where nearly 400 couples have civil unions, Chief Deputy County Clerk Paul Hinds said he expected an early morning "rush" of same-sex couples wanting to convert their unions into licenses.

The Fagianos planned to go to the Lake County clerk's office early Monday with their 7-year-old daughter, Riley, to get their marriage license with the date of their civil union ceremony: June 17, 2011.

They said that even though they haven't had any trouble proving their union for medical or tax purposes, or that they are both Riley's mom, it will be nice not to have to deal with so much paperwork.

"I used to say 'my wife, domestic partner—whatever box you have to check,' but now I can say 'wife,'" said Michele Fagiano, 35.

Although more than 1,600 same-sex couples have been able to get marriage licenses from the Cook County clerk's office since Feb. 21, when a federal judge in Chicago ruled that the delayed effective date of the state law was unnecessary, June 1 still carries significance for many who had waited to have celebrations until Sunday. The February ruling, which was effective only in Cook County, expanded the decision by another federal court judge to allow a terminally ill woman to marry her female partner before the law's effective date.

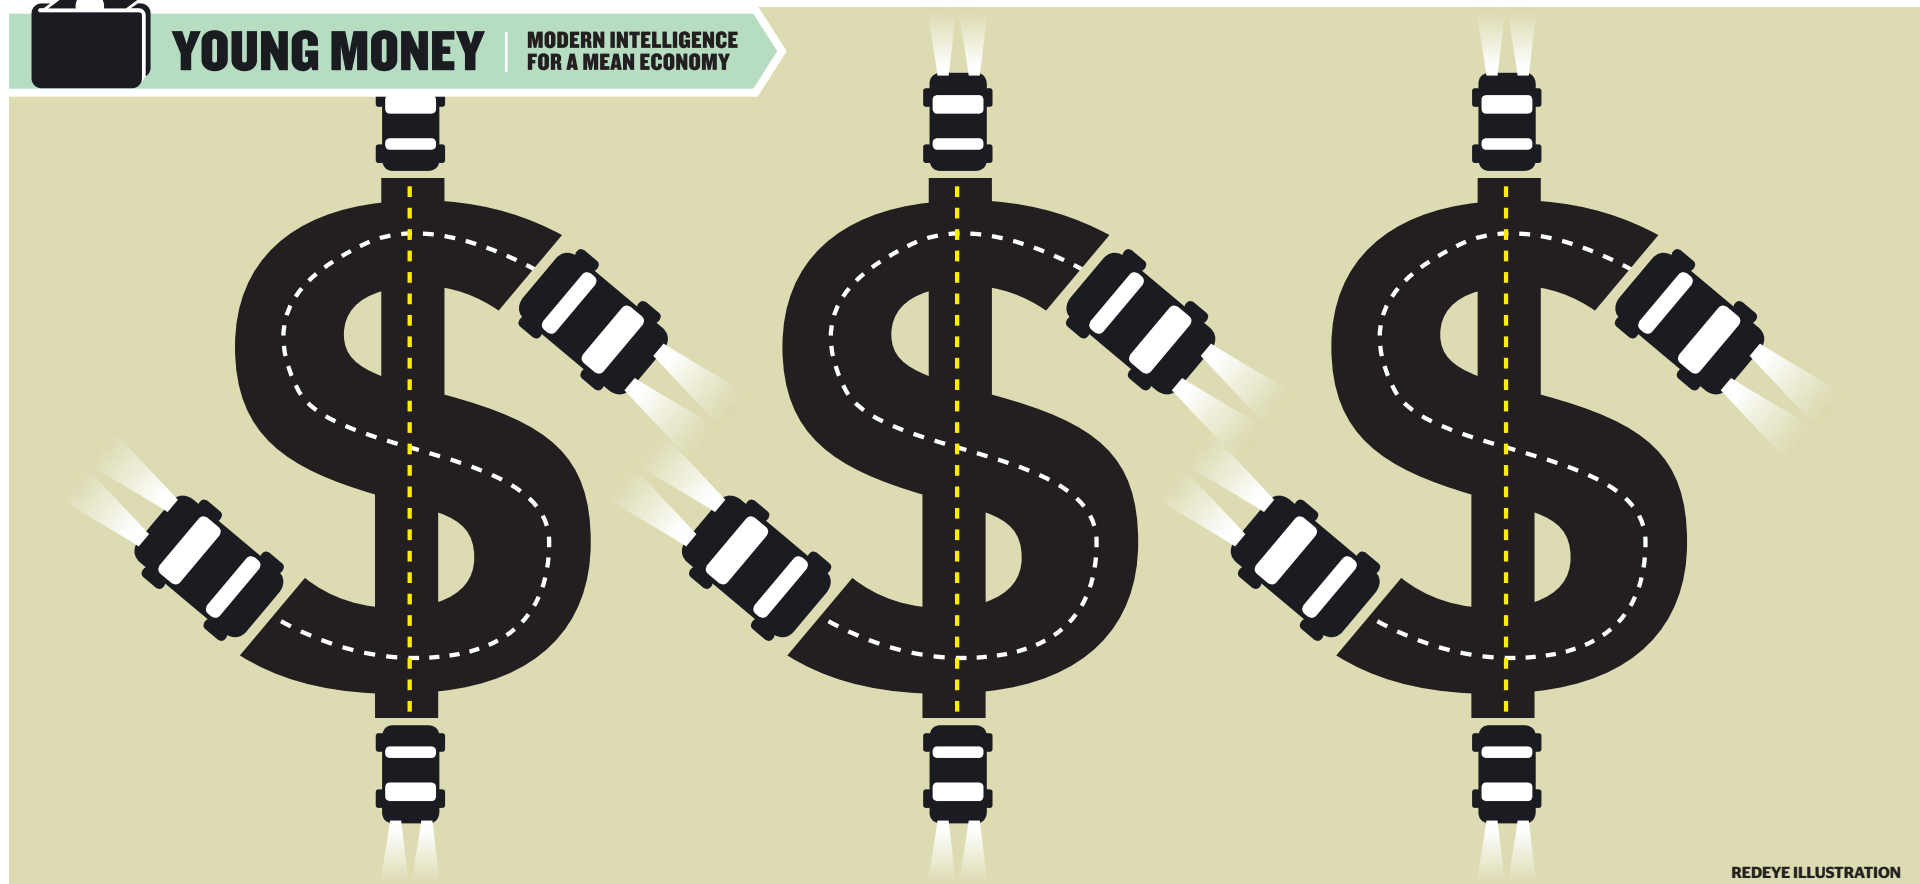

"There's a whole lot of things that we have experienced as a community with stops and starts that you don't want to make big plans on," said Tracy Baim, publisher of the Windy City Times newspaper, a weekly publication for the LGBT community in the Chicago area. "I think a lot of people like both the legal and symbolic reason of the June 1 date."

In Rogers Park, 40 couples—gay, lesbian and straight—were married in a group wedding ceremony Sunday evening at Unity in Chicago, according to David Viggiano, co-organizer for the event.

"Now that we have gay marriage, we need to push past labeling any marriages as gay, lesbian or straight and talk about marriage equality," Viggiano said.

The true cost of your commute

Reuters

Kay Phillips has been dreading this moment for a very long time.

The 59-year-old from Elon, N.C., often has wondered how much her commute cost her over the years. She decided to sit down and tabulate it once and for all for Reuters.

Specifically, the four years when Phillips was driving 2.5 hours each way to her job and back, every single workday. From little Granite Falls, up in the mountains of North Carolina's Caldwell County, to Chapel Hill for her job with the Adolescent Pregnancy Prevention Coalition of North Carolina.

The total tab, she figures: $43,000. And that is just in gasoline—not oil changes or repairs, not the value of her time.

"I always thought it would make me sick to find out," she said. "And it did."

And there's the rub. Even in less extreme circumstances, your commute likely is costing you much more than you realize—in driving-related expenses, in sheer number of hours on the road and in negative health outcomes.

In fact, 10.8 million Americans travel more than an hour each way to work. And 600,000 endure "megacommutes" of at least 90 minutes and 50 miles each way, according to the Census Bureau.

We often tend to dismiss commuting costs, as the necessary price of having a job. After all, especially in a difficult economic era, not everyone has the luxury of finding gainful employment within a short walk or bike ride from their home.

In fact, the Gallup-Healthways Well-Being Index, which surveyed Americans about daily commutes and their effects, discovered a virtual horror show. They found the longer the commute, the higher the levels of one's obesity, cholesterol, pain, fatigue and anxiety.

What's more, the costs of commuting disproportionately hit those with modest incomes. For the working poor, commuting gobbles up roughly 6 percent of income—double the percentage of those bringing home higher salaries, says Robert Puentes, a senior fellow at the Metropolitan Policy Program for the Washington, D.C.-based Brookings Institution.

For the working poor who drive alone—in- stead of in carpools, for instance—that percentage rises to 8 to 9 percent of income.

"Those costs are so high that it's actually changing the calculus of where people are willing to live," Puentes said.

Another useful way to calculate how much your commute really is costing you is by the mile.

Indeed, the personal-finance blogger Mr. Money Mustache—a 39-year-old Colorado resident named Pete who remains anonymous for his family's privacy, but who boasts more than 4 million unique hits for his popular website—rails that when you crunch those numbers, you discover that a lengthy commute is "the biggest thing that is keeping most people poor."

"The IRS allows you to deduct your business driving at about 55 cents per mile, and this is based on a realistic addition of costs," he told Reuters. "It is possible to beat the average by driving a smaller and more reliable car, but the cost is always much higher than just the price of gas."

"So if you have a 20-mile commute to work, multiply it out: 40 miles each workday times 50 cents a mile. And there are 2,500 of those workdays in every decade, so that 'not too bad' commute is burning at least $50,000 every 10 years."

Kay Phillips has since moved and now enjoys a more modest daily commute of 35 miles each way—40 minutes per trip tops, she says. But don't ask her how much all those prior commuting costs could have added up to for her retirement years.

After all, put $43,000 into an IRA or 401(k), compound it at even a modest rate of return, and you have a very nice nest egg indeed.

"Oh my goodness, don't go there," she said. "I don't even want to think about that."

Chicago Fire Department personnel bring a woman to an ambulance Sunday. NANCY STONE/TRIBUNE

2 still missing after boating accident

Chicago Tribune

Rescue efforts were suspended Sunday evening for two people who went missing after a boat capsized over the weekend in Lake Michigan about six miles from Chicago's shoreline, authorities said. Two other passengers were pulled from the water Sunday morning, one of whom died in a hospital.

The boat was believed to have left Burnham Harbor sometime Saturday, authorities said. It stopped in New Buffalo, Mich., on the same day and capsized on its way back to Burnham Harbor around 7 p.m. Saturday, according to Chicago Fire Chief Joe Roccasalva.

Around 6 a.m. Sunday, a fishing boat captain spotted the owner of the boat six miles from the shoreline before contacting rescue crews.

"He saw what he thought was a kayak," Roccasalva said. "It turned out to be an adult male in a life jacket."

The man was stable Sunday night, U.S. Coast Guard spokesman Levi Read said.

ANOTHER BOATING ACCIDENT

A Chicago man who went missing after rescuing his girlfriend in Lake Michigan waters off Michigan City, Ind., had not been found by late Sunday afternoon and the search was suspended. The search for Ron Wood Jr. will resume Monday, authorities said.

Two hours after the man was found, officials found a woman unconscious and in cardiac arrest, according to Chicago Fire Department spokesman Larry Langford. She was pronounced dead around 10 a.m., according to police and the Cook County medical examiner's office. She has not yet been identified.

The Coast Guard suspended its search for the two missing people, a 30-year-old man and a 27-year-old woman, after searching 1,600 square miles for a combined 43 hours, Read said. It was unclear if or when the search would resume, he said.

EXPRESS LINES

» The CTA will require more frequent security patrols at its parking facilities in a move to help commuters feel safe under a contract that is open for re-bidding, transit officials say.

» Riders on the South Shore Line, which carries about 6,500 people a day between northwest Indiana and downtown Chicago, now can use their smartphones as their tickets, the railroad said.

» Construction on a 3-acre skate park in Grant Park begins this week as city lawmakers consider granting the project $2.5 million in tax increment financing assistance. TRIBUNE

City bike parking: the good, the bad, the ugly

By Rachel Cromidas | REDEYE

Chicago has more than 14,000 public bicycle racks, but it still can be challenging to find places to lock up on the go.

The alternative options for locking a bike in public include parking signs, bus stop poles and the occasional tree. But not all cylindrical structures are created equal if you want your bicycle to stay where you locked it, according to Charlie Short, the bike safety and education manager for the city's Department of Transportation.

The city of Chicago won't cut a bicycle off any street signs, he said. Everything from parking signs to defunct parking meter poles are fair game. Some old parking meters even have stickers inviting cyclists to use them. But bicycle racks are still ideal, he said. Thanks to federal funding, the city installs about 500 new bike racks every year to keep up with demand.

What if there are no bicycle racks or street sign poles in sight? Riders park their bikes against a private fence or CTA sign at their own risk.

"We don't recommend locking to private property without the permission from the property owner," said Jason Jenkins, the education specialist for the advocacy organization Active Transportation Alliance. "They are within their right to cut the lock off with a lock cutter."

Property owners may be allowed to cut off bicycles locked to their property, Jenkins said, but they're not allowed to then claim the bikes as their own.

Some types of signs blur the lines between public and private property.

Jenkins cautions cyclists against locking to loading-dock signs outside apartment buildings. Though technically those signs belong to the city and are on public property, some apartment building managers don't realize this and will cut bicycles off of them as well, especially if they look like they could get in the way of a truck.

The same goes for CTA signs.

"There are signs that speak to the effect of not locking to CTA property, so we wouldn't recommend bus stop signs," he said. "Also, it's right there in the loading area where people are getting on and off the bus. You don't want to create an obstacle for people."

Some cyclists who have lost bicycles that were locked to CTA signs have reported finding them again by contacting the CTA's customer service line and tracking their bicycles down to CTA storage facilities.

If nothing else is available, Jenkins and Short both advised cyclists could lock up against trees as a last resort. Any tree planted on public property will do, even if it wasn't intended for bike parking. The trouble is finding a tree skinny enough for a U-lock, which is always preferable to a flimsy cable lock, Jenkins said.

Someone still might try to steal your bike, and then "you could have a stolen bicycle and a dead tree on your hands, and everybody loses," he said.

Freed U.S. soldier flown out of Afghanistan

The sole American prisoner of war held in Afghanistan was flown to a U.S. military hospital in Germany on Sunday after being freed in a swap deal for five Taliban militants who were released from the Guantanamo Bay prison in Cuba.

Army Sgt. Bowe Bergdahl had been held for nearly five years and his release, following years of on-off negotiations, became possible after harder-line factions of the Afghan Taliban shifted course and agreed to back it, U.S. officials said.

U.S. Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel said he hoped the exchange might lead to breakthroughs in reconciliation with the militants and rejected accusations from some Republicans it resulted from negotiations with terrorists, saying the swap had been worked out by the government of Qatar.

"We didn't negotiate with terrorists," Hagel said in an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press." "As I said and explained before, Sgt. Bergdahl was a prisoner of war. That's a normal process in getting your prisoners back."

Bergdahl, 28, was handed over at about 6 p.m. local time Saturday to U.S. forces who had flown in by helicopter.

He arrived at Landstuhl Regional Medical Center in Germany on Sunday. After receiving care Bergdahl would be transferred to another military medical facility in San Antonio, U.S. defense officials said, without giving a date for his return to the U.S.

His parents, appearing at a news conference in Boise, Idaho, were clearly aware of the long task ahead as Bergdahl adapts to being free, saying he needed time to decompress and his recovery was a "work in progress."

Bob and Jani Bergdahl said they had not yet spoken to their son.

Bergdahl, from Idaho, was the only known missing U.S. soldier in the Afghan war that began soon after the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks to force the Taliban from power.

He was captured in unknown circumstances in eastern Afghanistan on June 30, 2009.

U.N.: Almost 800 killed in Iraq in May

With 799 people killed in violence across Iraq in May, it is deadliest month this year, the United Nations said Sunday. The real toll is higher because the U.N. figures do not include casualties in the western province of Anbar, where the Iraqi army has been fighting tribal and insurgent groups.

6 climbers feared dead on Mt. Rainier

Four mountain climbers and two guides escorting them to the summit of Mt. Rainier were presumed dead after searchers found a trail of scattered equipment Saturday. No bodies have been located, said Fawn Bauer, a Mount Rainier National Park spokeswoman.

Ann B. Davis, 'Brady Bunch' actress, dies

Ann B. Davis, who played the devoted housekeeper Alice on the TV sitcom "The Brady Bunch" and won two Emmy awards as Schultz on "The Bob Cummings Show," died Sunday at age 88 after falling and hitting her head Saturday morning, CNN reported.

OH NO, NOT LIKE THIS

All that for nothing. Blackhawks will have to wait until next year

By Chris Sosa | REDEYE

Oh, it matters.

Any player who tells you home-ice advantage makes no difference is probably lying. No doubt the Blackhawks were thrilled Sunday's Game 7 of the Western Conference finals was in Chicago and not in the Kings' home arena.

"[Game 5 on Wednesday] was probably the loudest I've ever [heard the crowd] in the United Center," Hawks defenseman Niklas Hjalmarsson said Saturday. "It was unbelievable the way the crowd gave us energy."

The Hawks were hoping the fans saved their best for last. Here's what they were thinking Sunday as their team tried to knock off the Kings once and for all.

CHOSAS@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYESPORTSCHI

FIRST PERIOD

1 Saad lights 'em up (3)

Whatever happened to Brandon Saad in Game 5, the Hawks are loving it. The forward takes a pass from Patrick Kane (who else?) and banks it off Kings goalie Jonathan Quick for a 1-0 lead.

2 Full power (3)

You knew Kane and Jonathan Toews were due for a spectacular goal. This certainly qualifies: Kane deflects it right through his legs to a wide-open Toews, and all that's left for the captain to do is tap it home. 2-0.

Grrrr, Jeff Carter! (1)

So many Carter nightmares. After Corey Crawford knocks a rebound straight up, the Kings sharpshooter comes racing in and swats it past Crawford's head and into the net. Fans were hoping it would be ruled that he put it in with a high stick, but no such luck.

3 That guy? (1)

Justin Williams finds an opening and fires it past Crawford. The same Williams who ticked off Michal Handzus earlier in the period. Tie game.

Heeerre's Sharpy (3)

We have a Patrick Sharp sighting. He's been mostly invisible this series, but a seemingly harmless, bouncing shot skips past Quick. Sharp can try that a million more times—make that 100 million—and it won't beat Quick. This was not one of those times.

Score: Hawks 3, Kings 2

SECOND PERIOD

4 Sir Charles in the house (2)

Hey look, it's Charles Barkley wearing a Kane jersey. And making some of his NBA buddies look bad for not showing up (cough, Scottie Pippen, cough).

Hossa the Destroyer (2)

Haven't heard much from Marian Hossa in this series either. But if you look closely, you'll see he gives the Kings fits by driving to the net and getting in Quick's face. The shots are bound to go in eventually, right?

He gives and gives (3)

It might be possible for Saad to be TOO unselfish. Early in the period, twice he has the chance to turn and fire the puck on goal, only to try and hit a teammate. Of course, you could say his patience leads to a Mike Richards penalty because he helps keep it in the zone for, like, five minutes.

1: FLATLINED, AS IN DEAD, WHEN DO THE BEARS START?

2: NERVOUS, COULD BE AWESOME, COULD BE AWFUL.

3: HYPERVENTILATING, IS THIS REALLY HAPPENING?

4: WOOGHOO! STANLEY CUP FINAL, HERE WE COME!

Hands off! (3)

Kings captain Dustin Brown barrels into Crawford behind the play. No call. Guess he needs lessons from the Jonathan Quick School of Drama.

Karma's a you-know-what (1)

It's the Kings' turn to get lucky. The Hawks block a shot before it gets to Crawford, only to see it end up in Tyler Toffoli's wheelhouse. He finishes it off to tie the game.

What a waste (3)

The nice term for a player like Willie Mitchell is "agitator." To Hawks fans, he's more of a bully. He goes to the box for boarding. Then Drew Doughty is sent off for cross-checking. Sigh. And the Hawks still don't score. Blood pressure ... rising ...

5 Sharp strikes again (3)

We take back what we said about the Hawks' lousy power play. Sharp fires one past Quick's glove side, and the Madhouse is buzzing again.

Score: Hawks 4, Kings 3

THIRD PERIOD

6 Corey! Corey! (2)

Tanner Pearson makes a serious bid to tie it early in the third. Until Crawford smothers his backhand attempt.

7 Look who's got the puck (2)

We're not sure Quick was shaking in his skates when Marcus Kruger—not known for scoring goals—came rushing in on a partial breakaway. The Hawks fans watching, on the other hand, were hoping for the knockout punch.

Gulp (1)

How did that?! Oh. No. Marian Gaborik scores on a rebound. Tie game again.

Score: Hawks 4, Kings 4

OVERTIME

Wasn't meant to be (1)

A fluke of a goal ends the Blackhawks season. A tip of the cap for the effort. Maybe next year.

Final Score: Kings 5, Hawks 4

1	How did you survive the Blackhawks insanity this weekend?	Two things got me through: bourbon and rap music. Wait, there was a Hawks game?	I filled a 7-Eleven Big Gulp with whiskey, rum, tequila, vodka and Bourbon County Barleywine.	I had a defibrillator installed in my McMan cave at the McMurrays'. CLEEAARRRI	Who says I did? These answers are currently being written by my hologram.	Partied!
2	Now that the Hawks-Kings series is over we can all get back to watching baseball! HAHAAAA, just kidding.	... I will refill my 7-Eleven Big Gulp with whiskey, rum, tequila, vodka and Bourbon County Barleywine.	... I don't have to scream, "There goes that SOB Doughty" anymore.	... Elliott hologram is teaming up with the Tupac and Michael Jackson holograms for Coachella.	... It's time for the Stanley Cup finals.
3	If LeBron James is the Superman of the NBA, who's Derrick Rose?	Mr. Fantastic. You know, with bad knees.	Quailman from "Doug." He should just wear a belt on his head and underwear over his shorts.	I'm sorry ... Derrick Who?	Batman. Specifically the Batman who spent all year in a wheelchair after Bane broke his back.	The superstar who barely has played in two seasons.
4	Why does David Ortiz hate the Tampa Bay Rays so much?	Because he had a bad night in Ybor City and is still mad about it?	He's jealous their Dominican-American players actually learned English after playing 17 seasons in the United States.	He plays for Baasashhhhhhhstlin. They hate everything there.	He envies their superior clubhouse all-you-can-eat nacho bar.	Um, because he's on the rival Red Sox?
5	The Cubs have the "Core Four." What do the White Sox have?	The gruesome twosome: Chris Sale and Jose Abreu.	Four wins in the AL Central this season? Four fans at their games? Four players hitting over .200? The list goes on.	Great food at the Cell and Cork at the Park across the street! Let's have a brewskil!	I hear they're working on a nacho bar that will rival the Rays'. Ortiz is furious.	The vet and the rook: Paul Konerko and Jose Abreu.

THE DIGIT
15,900 PERCENT

Donald Sterling bought the L.A. Clippers for $12.5 million in 1981. If the sale to former Microsoft CEO Steve Ballmer goes through for $2 billion, Sterling will have made a 15,900 percent profit. Yikes.

Court win for college athletes

EA Sports reached a $40 million settlement with college football and basketball players in the case involving the use of the likeness of athletes, ESPN.com reported. It leaves the NCAA alone to defend itself in the upcoming antitrust trial led by former UCLA basketball player Ed O'Bannon. That case is scheduled to begin June 9.

Vince Vaughn would be proud

What do you do when you're eliminated early from the French Open? If you're Serena Williams, you crash a wedding. In a leopard leotard. "Wedding crasher!! Congrats!" the tennis superstar wrote on Instagram, where she posted her photos. And judging by the photos, it's clear Williams is proud of her body.

Workers patch a hole in the track Sunday. GETTY IMAGES

Holy ...
According to the Associated Press, the NASCAR Sprint Cup Race in Delaware was delayed after 160 laps Sunday because of potholes. NASCAR officials and safety crew members used a quick-drying concrete mixture to fill the holes that damaged Jamie McMurray's car. Chicagoans can relate. Oh, can they relate.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Gemini May 21-June 21
With the sun boosting your energy, you'll want to expand your social circle. Visit some new hot spots and introduce yourself to folks. Collect a few phone numbers and arrange a hot date.

Cancer June 22-July 22
There's a better way to handle what's going on in your love life. Deep down, you know this. You've just been caught up in some negative energy. Mercury is encouraging you to get a grip and take control, guiding things in a better direction.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22
Sometimes you underestimate your powers of attraction. Just because you're shy on the inside doesn't mean you come off that way. The moon says to trust that you've made a good impression on lots of flirty friends.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22
If you have to over think it, maybe it's just not meant to be. If you're involved with someone and you keep trying to make it work and that effort isn't creating results, take a step back. Mercury says to reconsider this relationship.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
Don't assume that you can read minds this week, because the moon is making it harder. Usually you're a natural psychologist, able to tune in to what people are really thinking and feeling. But this week your intuitive senses will be off.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21
You're thinking about the one who got away. That person who stomped on your heart and tore it to bits still haunts you from time to time. Mercury is making your feelings more intense, which isn't a good thing.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21
With the sun opposite your sign, you're feeling funky and out of sorts. Your usual fiery confidence is running low. Get together with some casual friends and flirt a bit—reconnect with some sexy vibes.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19
Jupiter is not making things easy for you right now. You're working long hours on the job and finding it difficult making ends meet. Meanwhile, your personal life has suddenly turned all weird. It's not you; it's the cosmos.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18
With the moon opposite your sign, it's time to reconsider the best path of action. If you've been chasing someone and trying to get him or her to date you, maybe you should pull back and act unavailable.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20
Venus is showing you that it's OK to be yourself in a relationship. You're getting better at opening up and sharing the most vulnerable parts of yourself with that special someone. Good for you.

Aries March 21-April 19
You're in a mood, and when a Fire sign gets wound up, watch out! The sun is increasing your restlessness. You'll consider calling up a former flame just to see if you can stir up some trouble. But is that really such a good idea?

Taurus April 20-May 20
You'll be drawn to deep, intense discussions as the moon encourages you to make a confession. Maybe you need to get a second opinion on that on-again, off-again relationship that's been driving you crazy.

Project Management

CERTIFICATE PROGRAM

Successful project management in today's business environment requires a combination of sound methodology and strong communication, team building and analytical skills. Professionals in Northwestern's Project Management program emerge thoroughly prepared for these challenges and new career opportunities. Tracks are offered for those just starting in project management and for experienced project managers who wish to prepare for PMP certification. We also offer opportunities for current PMP holders to earn PDUs and for students to customize their learning experience. Sessions are held in the Chicago Loop.

SCS is a registered provider for the Project Management Institute (PMI), the world's foremost advocate for the project management profession.

American invasion

Bravo reality personality ruffles some British feathers

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» lgomez@tribune.com
» @TribLuis

Get ready for the Juliet show.

During the series premiere of Bravo's "Ladies of London"—which premieres 9 p.m. Monday and revolves around American expats penetrating London's high society—Laguna Beach, Calif.-native Marissa Hermer implies that castmate and Northbrook native Juliet Angus likes to be the center of attention.

"When you go out with Juliet," Hermer says, "you buy tickets to the Juliet show."

Angus had not seen the episode before we spoke Thursday over the phone. When told about Hermer's comment, the fashion consultant argued that she isn't the only member of the cast with a strong personality. She did, however, admit she is a bit louder and more outspoken than what our friends across the pond are used to and can see why producers chose her for the show.

"When I first moved [to London] and got sorted out with my life, I was like, 'Where are the cameras? This needs to be a TV show,'" said Angus, who competed on ESPN's reality show "Beg, Borrow & Deal" in 2002. "I think I'm pretty comparable to most Americans, but here I'm out of line all the time and need to be quieted."

Angus was living in Montreal with her husband when they decided to move to London in 2010 for his job. We're told in the premiere that Angus used to run in Hollywood circles and is now part of London's ultra-exclusive social scene. This scene, we're led to believe, isn't very accepting of outsiders—a point that is made over and over (and over) on the show—let alone Americans.

Cast member and British model Annabelle Neilson calls Angus "an overexcited terrier" in the first episode. Caprice Bourret—a Hacienda Heights, Calif.-native and fellow model who is viewed as an honorary Brit, having lived in London 17 years—describes Angus as "very American." And she didn't mean that in a good way.

"You don't want to be called 'very American' here," Angus said. "Julie Montagu—who I become very good friends with when she comes up in the later episodes—is from [Sugar Grove]. She married into an aristocratic family and she's more American than me. When we get together, Annabelle said, 'You both need to slow down and quiet down.' You're supposed to turn down your American-ness."

The show might as well be called "The Real Housewives of London" due to its similarity to Bravo's successful franchise. There's a glamorous, all-female cast and some of the friction you've come to expect from "Real Housewives," in this case between the American and British socialites. Entrepreneur Caroline Stanbury falls in the latter category and is so over-the-top snooty she feels more like a movie antagonist than a reality show protagonist.

While some cast members seem determined to lose their "American-ness" because of the stigma attached to it, Angus appears to embrace it. She wishes the British would "lighten up" and said there are times when she's more interested in changing London than having it change her.

"When you go to an American city, and I've lived in a couple, it's quite easy to adapt. London is not so easy. It's the best place in the world to live, but there's a certain way they do things here. It takes a while to acclimate to them. At first you want to change everybody. ... Everything is so small and old and traditional. It has its own charm," said Angus, before having a sudden change of heart: "Now that I think about it, I don't want it to change."

red hot HE'S SORRY

Difference of opinion

"Jupiter Ascending" co-stars Channing Tatum and Mila Kunis had very different views on "(I Wanna) Channing All Over Your Tatum," the parody song that Jaime Foxx first performed in February 2013 on "Jimmy Kimmel Live," during their interview in the June issue of GQ magazine:

"That one got away from me. That one wasn't my idea, trust me. It literally was the farthest thing from my idea. ... It was super annoying to hear everybody singing the thing all day."

—Channing Tatum

"I don't think he was haunted by it. I'm pretty sure he came up with a whole other verse for that song—it had to do with my first name and my last name. I think he loved it."

—Mila Kunis

Justin Bieber apologized Sunday for making a racially insensitive joke five years ago that was caught on a video. "I'm very sorry," Bieber, 20, said in a statement to The Associated Press. "I take all my friendships with people of all cultures very seriously and I apologize for offending or hurting anyone with my childish and inexcusable behavior." Bieber was 15 when he made the joke during the filming of his documentary "Never Say Never."

The little prince

Snow White and Prince Charming have welcomed a new prince. Actually, "Once Upon a Time" co-stars Ginnifer Goodwin and Josh Dallas welcomed their first child—a baby boy whose name had yet to be released—May 29, Us Weekly reports. The couple were married in April.

Congrats

Grammy Award-winning singer-songwriter Melissa Etheridge married "Nurse Jackie" co-creator Linda Wallem on Saturday at the San Ysidro Ranch in Montecito, Calif., People magazine says. Chelsea Handler, Rosie O'Donnell, Jane Lynch, Whitney Cummings and Peter Facinelli were among the guests.

THE DIGIT

$70 MILLION

Critics might hate it, but Disney's fairy tale flick "Maleficent" earned $70 million over the weekend, the biggest box-office debut of star Angelina Jolie's career.

POWER WOMEN

Oprah Winfrey is still all-powerful. At No. 14, the media mogul had the highest ranking from the entertainment sector on the Forbe's list of "The World's 100 Most Powerful Women," Reuters reports. Singer Beyoncé came in at No. 17 in the rankings, which Forbes says are based on money, media, impact and spheres of influence. Other celebrities on the list include Sofia Vergara (No. 32), Ellen DeGeneres (No. 46), Angelina Jolie (No. 50), Shakira (No. 58), Lady Gaga (No. 67) and model Gisele Bündchen (No. 89).
